In this club students will convert cardboard boxes into toys, games, furniture, storage, etc., using innovative STEM skills.

Chess Club

In countries where chess is offered widely in schools, students exhibit excellence in the ability to recognize complex patterns and consequently excel in math and science.

One famous Chess player once said: "Chess is in many ways like life itself." "It's all condensed in a playful manner in a game format and it's extremely fascinating because first I'm in control of my own destiny, I'm in charge. You must be responsible for your actions, you make a move, you had better think ahead about what's going to happen, not after it happens, because then it's too late."
